

The initiatives of the UAB Minority Health & Research Center (MHRC) are improving health conditions and saving lives in Alabama's rural and urban communities, in afterschool programs serving low-income children, and throughout the entire Southeast.

Funds raised at the annual gala make it possible to:

- Educate people and empower them to take charge of their health
- Encourage minority students to seek careers in medicine and science
- Extend access to health care for all
- Eliminate health disparities through groundbreaking research

These programs benefit everyone, for they promote stronger communities, a healthier workforce, and inspire the next generation of outstanding researchers and leaders in health care.

The UAB MHRC is a university-wide interdisciplinary center approved by the Board of Trustees of the University of Alabama since 2003.
